

casting@pastpreservers.com

Past Preservers People

Alice J. Robinson
Curator & Anthropologist, British

Bio:

Alice says, "I am trained as a curator and archaeological/anthropological researcher. I am the youngest woman ever to become a curator at the British Museum. I worked as a curator for the British Museum's Department of Asia, specialising in knowledge of South Asia; Sri Lanka and India. I looked after 30,000 ancient objects. I have also worked at Stonehenge, and was involved in the discovery of a sister henge site. As for my background, I studied at Oxford University and graduated in 2005 with an MA in archaeology and anthropology. I have undertaken archaeological and anthropological fieldwork in the UK and abroad in countries such as Romania, Nepal, Belize and Sri Lanka."

Education:

M.A. in Archaeology at Oxford University
B.A. in Archaeology & Anthropology at Oxford University

Media Experience:

Alice has appeared in number media productions from BBC's Conning the Conmen to the History Channel's Chasing Mummies to Channel 4's Time Team. She has been an expert contributor, partaken in stunt work, produced, and even hosted the aforementioned television credits.

Professional Experience:

Alice is a renowned archaeologist and curator with exception professional experience, from being the youngest woman curator ever at the British Museum to conducting contemporary British archaeological research. She has spent the last four years being a TV producer and director for high profile anthropological & archaeological & historical television shows.

casting@pastpreservers.com

Pastpreservers.com